CANADIANS SEEK TO CHANGE BOUNDARY

Control of Salmon Industry of the Northwest Said to Be Involved.

BELINGHAM, Wash., June 22.—Control of the salmon fishing industry of Puget Sound, worth fifteen million dollars annually, is said to be involved in an elaborate survey begun today by engineers in the employ of the Canadian government. It is stated that from data gathered by the engineers, representations to the United States government will be prepared seeking to show that the present boundary line through Haro Strait is incorrect and not in accord with the award of the German Emperor, who was appointed umpire under the treaty of Washington in 1871, by which the San Juan Island dispute with Great Britain was settled.

Should the protest of the Canadians be allowed and the line established as they declare it should be, many small islands and a large part of San Juan Island itself would become British possessions.

and launches were dispatched from Victoria yesterday conveying the parties which will do the field work. Five men arrived at Olga, the nearest approach to Mount Constitution, on Orcas Island, last night, and tents, flashlight and supplies were telephoned to the top of the mountain.

Nightly for a period of several weeks to come, a light will be flashed from the crest of Mount Constitution, a beacon from which the engineers will complete, by triangulation, certain distances and boundaries in the vicinity of the international line.

Members of the engineering party refused to discuss the purport of their work, but readily admitted that they were sent into the United States by the Canadian government for the purpose of running lines with reference to boundaries.

MISS JOHNSON, Prop.

NAN IS SORRY SHE LEFT US

Miss Nan Aspinwall, the Montana cowgirl, who was a dweller in Honolulu town for some months and while here played a successful engagement at one of the local theatres, who has just completed a five-thousand-mile ride on horse back from San Francisco to New York carrying a message from Mayor McCarthy to Mayor Gaynor writes Honolulu friends from Lebanon, Penn., that she has spent a goodly portion of the time since leaving here lamenting the fact that she ever departed the coral strand of Waikiki.

"The happiest moments of my long ride across mountains, deserts and prairies have been the memories of the time spent in Hawaii," states Miss Aspinwall.

The Harbinger Patriot, under date of June 30th, has this to say of the daring girl rider, who was once a familiar figure on the streets of Honolulu:

Smashing all long-distance and endurance records for horseback riding and establishing a world's record for herself, Miss Nan J. Aspinwall, more commonly known as the Montana Girl, arrived in this city at 3:30 yesterday afternoon, riding astride her handsome sorrel mare on the last lap of her 5000-mile trip from San Francisco to New York City.

The plucky rider is the typical cowgirl of the western plains, is about five feet six inches tall, and dresses in true western style. She wears a broad-brimmed felt hat, a comfortable looking blue and white "Middle" waist, short brown riding skirt and boots.

Miss Aspinwall certainly thinks a great deal of her horse, Lady Ellen Lorenzen, a thoroughbred. She is a fine-looking eight-year-old, seventeen hands high, and averages twenty-five miles a day hard travel. No one is allowed to go near the horse except her mistress, who gives her a bath and rubdown every day, and as a result she is in the very pink of condition.

Miss Aspinwall left San Francisco on September 1, 1910, and was lost for two days and a night in the mountains, and at one time was forced to ride ninety miles between watering places on the desert. Her longest stop was four days. She is carrying a message pertaining to the exposition to be held in San Francisco in 1915 from Mayor McCarthy of that city to Mayor Gaynor of New York city. She supports herself entirely by exhibitions of lariat-throwing, at which she is an expert.

NATIONAL GUARDS FALL ENCAMPMENT

Adjutant-General J. W. Jones of the National Guard of Hawaii expects orders from headquarters in about ten days instructing him in regard to the fall encampment.

The plans submitted suggest that the six companies of infantry and one hospital company of this island camp at Lihue, two at a time, for a week's duration, the two companies at Maui to camp at Waikuku and the one at Hilo to camp in the immediate vicinity of that city. As things generally turn out as planned by the National Guard, this system of encampment will probably be adopted.

LIEUT. JOHNSON TO INSTRUCT MILITIA

Lieutenant Johnson of the Eighth Infantry will arrive in Honolulu some time in September for the purpose of instructing the militia.

At the present time Johnson is undergoing a course of instruction at the Fort Leavenworth School, in regard to the system and routine set down by the U. S. government for teaching such a body of men.

Marcello Cabalos, a Filipino, who was accidentally struck by an automobile owned by Mrs. C. J. Robinson last night, and who was afterwards sent to the Queen's Hospital for treatment, is improving, according to the physicians. It is expected that he will be out in a few days. When Cabalos was picked up by the police, after the accident, it was thought that his skull had been fractured, but examination at the hospital by the physicians proved that he had not suffered quite so seriously.

BIJOU PROGRAM IS A GOOD ONE

There are two sets of headlines at the Bijou this week, and they divided honors last night. The first set consists of Duke Johnson and Mae Williams, the colored singers and dancers, and the crowd went to see them. But when the Reece trio appeared in a musical novelty act and ended by sending out one of the best contortionists that has ever shown here, and that a little girl looking not over twelve years old, the house was lavish in its applause.

There have been some poor shows at the Bijou, but this is not one of them. The Reece trio, a man, woman and the child-wonder, are all good. The man plays everything from a xylophone to a piano, and is a "shark" on a cornet and a tuba, while his ragtime work on a slide trombone is a whole hit by itself.

The little girl, billed as La Petite Laurie, not only takes part in the musical end of the skit, but closes it with some unusually good contortion work. Her star effort is picking up a handkerchief from the floor with her teeth, bending backward to the floor from a standing position on two chairs. This child apparently has no backbone and her slender arms are strong as steel.

The coon singers and dancers, Johnson and Wells, make their usual hit. Johnson is three-fourth of this team. His eccentric dancing is high-class and he is full of comedy. Mae Wells easily makes good in her songs and dances a little, but that little is well done.

The Boardman sisters are only fair. As singers they do not score, but they make up for vocal shortcomings by a little Dutch dance that runs with a catchy song.

The films are interesting, one being scenes from Australian gold mining. The effect of the whole shows is a good one, a lively one, and it deserves generous patronage this week.

FILMS THE BEST ON SAVOY BILL

If the Ragtime trio would stick to chorus work and develop that, they would please local audiences better. The Ragtime Trio members work together well, but the songs sung last night were neither new nor particularly attractive.

Barnes and Robinson, in piano and song selections, made a moderate success. The songs are so badly sung that the words can hardly be understood in the back half of the house.

There are a lot of good films at the Savoy this week, though, and one of them is particularly laughable—a "rube" film, with Zeke and Zeb both rivals for the hand of a young lady. Inasmuch as the amorous swains are both on the shady side of sixty, at least in the pictures, the chase furnishes many a laugh and when the lady finally throws both down, the climax is not only funny, but unusually well depicted in the films.

The Savoy will not disappoint the lovers of moving pictures.

Castle dived after a few bunts Saturday off the Keolos, but went in the wrong direction almost every time, a few of them landing right over him as he ran up to meet them.

Koyama is hitting some of late. He managed to get two peachy hits off Joy Sunday while at bat three times. He did not find Castle at all in Saturday's game.

Scorer Raposa, is getting tired of keeping track of those preliminary games. The errors are fearful. The changing of players makes it tiresome for him also.

The members of the Keio baseball team were the guests of honor at a reception given by Consul Uyeno at his residence on Nuuanu avenue last night.

What will the Chinese do to the Keolos tomorrow is the talk around town. They have a chance to make good this time.

Hoopli, one of the heavyweights on the Star team, scored two runs for his team Saturday, and netted a two-bagger.

An agreement for ten years whereby the Boston and Albany will allow the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad to run trains between Pittsburg and North Adams, Ashland and Boston and Newton Highlands and Boston has been made.
